10TH Edition – September 2010

GUIDESTAR[®] is the registered trademark and operating name of GuideStar USA, Inc., a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization.

Welcome to the 2010 GuideStar Nonprofit Compensation Report. This year's report, the 10th in our annual series, is derived from information on more than 149,000 individual positions at more than 99,000 tax-exempt organizations. The executive summary presents findings based not only on this report but also on data for previous years.

The GuideStar Nonprofit Compensation Report remains the only large-scale analysis of its kind based entirely on data reported to the IRS. It also continues to be the most comprehensive nonprofit compensation study available.

Accurate, complete, and authoritative information on the nonprofit sector is more important than ever. The Pension Protection Act of 2006 increased the penalties for excessive benefit transactions, including overpayment of nonprofit executives. Meanwhile, Congress, donors, and the media continue to scrutinize nonprofit salaries.

Nonprofits must demonstrate to oversight agencies, grantmakers of all types (government, corporations, and private foundations), and individual donors that the salaries and benefits they offer are justified. They must document their compensation practices and be prepared to help their supporters understand why these practices are appropriate. The GuideStar Nonprofit Compensation Report is a valuable tool for achieving these goals.

This volume was conceived, designed, and compiled by Chuck McLean, GuideStar's vice president for research. We welcome your comments and suggestions. Please e-mail your thoughts to cmclean@guidestar.org.

Thank you for acquiring the 2010 GuideStar Nonprofit Compensation Report. We look forward to hearing your comments as we plan for the 2011 edition.

Compensation Report Overview and Methodology

The 2010 GuideStar Nonprofit Compensation Report draws exclusively from data reported on Form 990 and Form 990-EZ. These are information returns filed annually with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) by most tax-exempt organizations with annual revenues of $25,000 or more. Organizations are instructed to supply compensation information for all officers, directors, trustees, and key employees. Additionally, information is provided for the five most highly compensated other employees who earn at least $100,000.

The report considers 149,608 observations from 99,590 forms filed by 501(c) nonprofits with the Internal Revenue Service for fiscal year 2008. Statistics are reported on total compensation. Individuals with total compensation of less than $15,000 were not included in order to make the cleansing and processing of the data more manageable.

The 2010 GuideStar Nonprofit Compensation Report also reports statistics on annual increases in total compensation. Because these statistics are driven by direct comparison with 2007 data for individuals who held the same position at the same organization, these data are less rich. It includes 51,234 observations from 38,358 organizations.

The 2010 report presented an additional challenge. For fiscal years beginning in 2008, the IRS presented an entirely new Form 990. Among the changes made was the way in which compensation is reported. It is uncertain what that impact is on overall compensation figures. In the small sample we were able to look at using both the old and new methods of reporting a given individual's compensation, we generally found differences did not exceed ± 3 percent. The leap of faith is made that over a large number of observations, the differences in the methods would even out, and this report uses compensation figures reported using both the old and new methods. However, we have chosen not to mix old and new data for the section on annual increases in compensation.

Job Categories

The report shows the following job categories broken down by various combinations of gender, geography, organization type, and organization size. Because of the way organizations are required to report compensation on Form 990, only one position is available for most organizations, that of CEO/Executive Director, so the report is extremely robust in that area, less so in the others. The numbers in parentheses indicate the number of individuals in the report who were classified into that position.

- CEO/Executive Director (91,187)

- Top Administrative Position (5,879)
- Top Business Position (2,892)
- Top Development Position (5,973)
- Top Education/Training Position (1,269)
- Top Facilities Position (771)
- Top Financial Position (20,628)
- Top Human Resources Position (2,582)
- Top Legal Position (1,182)
- Top Marketing Position (1,577)
- Top Operations Position (6,929)
- Top Program Position (5,265)
- Top Public Relations/Communications Position (1,005)
- Top Technology Position (2,419)

The machine coding of the information into these job categories was relatively straightforward after extensive data cleansing, except in the case of CEO/Executive Director. Heads of organizations might be called President, CEO, Administrator, or some other title. When someone with such a title was the most highly compensated person reported on an organization's Form 990, the default coding was into the CEO/Executive Director category. In other cases, more care had to be taken. For example, physicians and football coaches frequently make more money than the heads of their organizations.

A single position might be coded into more than one job category. For example, if a person's title was Director of Finance and Operations, and no other person at the organization was more highly compensated in either area, the position was coded as both the top financial position and the top operations position.

A sample of 200 organizations representing 479 individuals was hand-coded and compared with the machine coding. Four coding errors were discovered, which implies that the error rate for machine coding is well within acceptable bounds.

Output Display

For each combination of variables with at least 5 observations, information is displayed. When there are fewer than 10 observations, only the average and median values are displayed. For between 10 and 20 observations, we display the average, and the 25th, median (50th percentile), and 75th percentiles. For more than 20 observations, the 10th and 90th percentiles are also displayed. These percentile values approximate the distribution of compensation within a given category. As an example, if the 25th percentile value is $43,278, this means that about 25 percent of employees in the category made less than $43,278 and about 75 percent made more than that.

In cases where there are few observations, the median is likely to be the most reliable statistic. Still, this report does not use sampling but draws instead from every fiscal year 2008 Form 990 available to the author on August 23, 2010, on which compensation information was reported and could be codified. In most categories where the number of observations is small, it is because the number of such organizations in the entire population is as small or almost as small.

In general, the report is not useful for comparisons across categories, especially when the number of observations is small. For example, in the $250,000 to $500,000 budget group, the median salary for the top legal position is $71,714, versus $54,692 for CEOs. The CEO median, however, is based on 12,232 organizations whereas that for top legal position is based on only 19 organizations, and the CEO is more highly compensated in each of those 19.

Besides job category, results are displayed for various combinations of gender, organization size, geography, and organization type.

Gender

The Form 990 does not require the reporting of gender. All of the gender assignments in the report have been based on first or middle names. It has been assumed that someone with a first name of “Robert” is a male and someone with a first name of “Jane” is a female. Many names, for instance, “Pat” and “Carol,” could not be assigned a gender at all.

We believe that this technique is legitimate. It was possible to assign a gender for more than 80 percent of the positions in the report by coding only those with names that are common and almost exclusively associated with one gender. Two different GuideStar employees, one male and one female, went through the process of matching names to genders. The congruence between the two was nearly 100 percent, and final coding was based only on those names that both employees matched to the same gender.

There is, unfortunately, a further validation of this technique. In most instances, female compensation lags behind that of males. Also, females are more prevalent in top positions at small organizations, whereas males dominate medium and large organizations.

Organization Size

Organization size is represented here by annual expenses. Two different groupings are used, depending on the amount of information available for a particular table:

Four groups: $500,000 or less; $500,001 to $1,000,000; $1,000,001 to $5,000,000; and greater than $5,000,000

Nine groups: $250,000 or less; $250,001 to $500,000; $500,001 to $1,000,000; $1,000,001 to $2,500,000; $2,500,001 to $5,000,000; $5,000,001 to $10,000,000; $10,000,001 to $25,000,000; $25,000,001 to $50,000,000; and greater than $50,000,000

Geography

Two different geographical groupings are used: state (including Puerto Rico), and metropolitan statistical area.

Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA)

Data are not displayed for all MSAs, based solely on whether there are sufficient data available. The level of detail available varies greatly, with larger MSAs obviously having more information available than smaller ones. At least some information is available for each of the following MSAs:

Organization Type

Organization type is classified from the National Taxonomy of Exempt Entities (NTEE), a hierarchical system developed by the National Center for Charitable Statistics (NCCS) and used to group nonprofit organizations. The only exception for this is that non-501(c)(3) organizations without NTEE major group codes are listed under their IRS subsection. The report uses three levels of the hierarchy: NTEE major group (general), NTEE decile group (more specific), and NTEE centile group (most specific). For example, the Museum of Modern Art belongs to the NTEE major group “Arts, Culture, and Humanities,” the NTEE decile group “Museum, Museum Activities,” and the NTEE Centile group “Art Museums.” More information about the NTEE system, including definitions, is available at the NCCS Web site (<http://nccs.urban.org/classification/NTEE.cfm>).
